crew instead. That's all that we know about the Engineers apart from their appearance which is pale with black eyes and a 9-12-foot stature.

4. ABELOTH (STAR WARS)

As a giant of a franchise which is set a long time ago in a galaxy far far away and with nearly innumerable aliens over its vast lore, it was difficult to find an alien that would be unique enough. Out of all though there are a few that stand out. But first things first, one of the major themes in the Star Wars franchise is the all-powerful and all-encompassing force. That brings us neatly to the Ones, who are literally embodiments of the force. One representing the Dark side, one representing the Balance and one representing the Light. So we could say that the Ones are probably the most powerful beings in the galaxy. Right? Well, no! Abeloth is an entity that literally puts the fear of God in the Ones and it took all three of the Ones and the power of the Killik hives to just imprison her. Yeah, Abeloth, out forced the force! Even after being imprisoned, Abeloth manages to escape from time to time and it requires the Dark and Light side of the Ones to lock her up again!

5. WEEPING ANGELS (DOCTOR WHO)

Another mega-franchise with a ton of interesting aliens to choose from. We have cultural icons like the Cybermen, Daleks, The Silence and Timelords to boot. But as terrifying and unique as they are, there is one alien that surpasses them all in terms of its concept, powers and fear factor. And that, is the race of Weeping

Angles. Benigne and harmless as they may seem at first sight (as they appear to be innocent looking angel statues) it is when they are not being looked at that their true nature is revealed. These unique critters are said to be Quantum locked. Which, according to Doctor Who is that they simply don't exist as life forms when they are being observed. But when they are not being looked at, they are free to move. And move fast they will! Oh, and they won't simply kill you when they do catch you. No no, that would be too easy. One of their abilities includes touching their victims to displace them in time to a point before the victims birth which in turn lets them feed off the "potential energy" that is created due to the time paradox that is created.

6. ZENO (DRAGON BALL FRANCHISE)

This little entity is currently the supreme ruler of the Dragon Ball multiverse. We say "currently" because Dragon Ball does have a tendency to introduce new characters which simply dwarf the others in power. Currently though, Zeno is all-powerful and can simply erase whole universes with a wave. We don't know much about the character yet but what we do know is that he has a child-like appearance and behaviour and is said to have erased six of the original 18 universes (and one divergent timeline) even before the Universal Survival Arc of Dragon Ball Super. We have no idea if Zeno is any good in hand to hand combat, you know, the kind we are used to when it comes to Dragon Ball, but we doubt the raw power to simply erase someone, no matter how powerful, needs much in the fighting department. Zeno is also quite indifferent to the lives of people in the universes he created which makes him terrifying to even the gods of all universes.

7. Q (STAR TREK FRANCHISE)

A franchise with no shortage of interesting aliens, Star Trek as a whole has some of the most iconic aliens. From the evergreen and green-blooded Spock to the oh so close to home money-grubbing Ferengi, Star Trek has a fascinating way to showcase stories set in the future with aliens which are just as relevant and relatable in today's day and age. Oh and Star Trek has also got some of the most interesting aliens like the Borg and the Silicon-based life forms but by far the most interesting has to be Q. Showing up in the first episode of The Next Generation, Q shows up with a near-infinite and god-like power. The rules of the universe, the laws of physics and reality itself are all mere playthings for Q. In later episodes, he even displays the ability to travel to any point in time. Q is also immortal and omnipotent with nothing in the universe capable of killing him except other Q weapons which are later explored in episodes revolving around the war between Q's. d
