

the Manage Storage option, and you will have the list that you were looking for at your disposal. Along with the name of the account or group arranged in descending amount of data shared will be the exact numbers about how much data you have shared. You can click on each chat and see what data is accounted for, select the ones that you want to star or delete, and to make the process easier, rank it according to their size and recency. Here you will also be able to find the media items that had been shared many times and the ones larger than 5MB, so you might as well do some data management while you are in there.

USE THE EARPIECE FOR AUDIO MESSAGES

All of you must have landed in this situation where you have an audio message in your inbox, which you must listen to urgently, but are in a space where you cannot play it out loud and do not even have your headphones with you. The WhatsApp developers certainly gave a thought to such a situation and have baked in a feature that lies right in front of your eye in plain sight. It is, that you can use the earpiece of your phone, the one you use to attend regular calls to listen to audio messages in WhatsApp.

Message notification and preview settings page

Whenever you want to listen to an audio message privately, instead of lowering the volume and holding the phone with the speaker shoved into your ears, you can use this, and avoid making yourself and everyone else around you awkward. Just play the message, and like you would with a regular call, hold your phone close to your ears in the way you would during a regular call. The app would automatically switch the output to the earpiece and switch off the screen to avoid any unintentional touches too, which is pretty convenient.

TURN OFF MESSAGE PREVIEWS

If you are someone who has to inevitably show other people your phone screen, or worse give others your phone regularly for some reason or other, this feature is just tailor made for you. To facilitate the maintenance of your personal space, while your phone is being used or viewed by someone else, WhatsApp allows users to turn off message previews.

To put this feature to use, all you have to do is, open the Settings menu of the application and go to the Notifications section. There, you will be presented with a wide variety of options to pick and choose from. You can customize whether the app shows notifications at all, or change the way it shows, depending upon your preference.

SHARE MEDIA IN THE BEST OR WORST QUALITY

Social media and messaging applications are infamous for invariably compressing the media files shared across their platform, resulting in a loss of quality. While for some users this compression helps in cut down on data use and the subsequent internet bills, for others this sometimes creates a big problem. No matter where you fall in this classification, WhatsApp has an option that would let you choose the data quantity that you want to put to use when sharing media.

If you want to customize the media upload quality on WhatsApp, go to the Settings menu and locate

Choose how you like your media to be the Storage and Data menu option. Click on it and scroll to the bottom of the menu that opens. There you will find the Media Upload Quality option. Inside, you will be presented with three options, namely, Auto, Best quality, and Data saver. Depending upon your requirement, choose the option and restart the app for good measure, and you will be set. d
