

Scrat finally gets his acorn

Scrat, the hyperactive squirrel from Ice Age, got his acorn after 20 years of being foiled by Arctic elements! <https://digit.in/may22-13>

PS5 Variable Refresh Rate

Sony announced that the support for Variable Refresh Rate (VRR) on PlayStation 5 will roll out later this week. <https://digit.in/may22-14>

THE MOST LEGENDARY ANIME RIVALRIES IN ANIME

Big power-ups, earth-shattering battles and crazy training arcs. But the most important yardstick anime has at its disposal is the obsessive rivals!

Ali Akbar Merchant | ali@digit.in Anime is a source of entertainment for a whole bunch of people and its popularity grows every day. Oh, and don't you dare call anime cartoons! They are much more than that. Getting to the point though, one of the most iconic features in anime is the rivalries that characters have among themselves. The drive to one-up their rivals is very much a staple in most stories. And it does not even have to be the main villain who ends up being the biggest rival to the protagonists. In most cases, the biggest rivals are either the friends of the protagonist or people from his crew, or in some cases villains who have now turned to the light side. So let's go ahead and explore some of the most legendary rivalries in anime that we have borne witness to.

GOKU A.K.A KAKAROT VS VEGETA

Let's start with what is arguably the most iconic rivalry of them all. Introduced as the main villain of the Saiyan arc, Vegeta makes his appearance in the first few episodes of the Dragon Ball Z anime. Ever since his first defeat at the hands of Goku, Vegeta had taken it upon himself to surpass and defeat Goku. The rivalry not only continued throughout the entire run of Dragon Ball Z but also continued on into Dragon Ball Super, albeit in a more friendly way. You see after Vegeta was defeated by Goku in the Saiyan arc, he somewhat became a member of the Z fighters, as unwilling as he might have been. He fought and helped in defeating the main villain of the next three arcs but the idea of surpassing and defeating Goku was always at the forefront of his mind. Later on, in Dragon Ball Super, he still wanted to surpass Goku as he still considered him a rival but still made peace with the fact that he was not the top dog of the Saiyan.

NARUTO VS SASUKE

If you somehow didn't agree that the rivalry between Goku and Vegeta was the most iconic in all of anime, then you probably thought the crown should