ost of the top-grossing movies and some of the most anticipated TV shows have had their origins in comics. You can say that they are the genesis of our modern pop culture. And the issues that brought into existence our beloved characters are now valued at exorbitant prices. Mint condition issues, these days, sell well into the hundreds of thousands of dollars at auctions. Today, we will be bringing you some of the most highly valued comic books of all time. The value of these comics is always dependent on the condition of the issues so the same issue could sell at varying prices. Just something to keep in mind. So let's get right into it...

CAPTAIN AMERICA #1

($915,000)

This all American superhero made his first appearance in Captain America #1 in 1941 where the cover art features the stars and stripes spangled superhero punching Hitler right in the face. In the very first issue, he didn't even have his signature round shield that we are so familiar with. The story was written by Jack Kirby and Joe Simon and at launch, this 68-page issue just sold at 10-cents. A 9.4-graded copy of this issue sold at a whopping $915,000 while a 9.2-graded copy sold at $343,057. Just goes to show how valuations with just 0.2 of a grade make a difference.

ALL STAR COMICS #8

($936,233)

While this issue was about the broader Justice Society of America story, it also had the first appearance
