WHAT INDIANS HAD TO SAY

For what it's worth, India has about 23 million users on Twitter. A lot of users seem to be incredibly happy that Musk has taken over Twitter while others fear that it will lead to hate speech. It's been a roller coaster ride here and it's only going to get more interesting. Anand Mahindra chipped in with his two cents. He says that allowing trolls and the like to show themselves on the platform will make catching them much easier for Indian law enforcement. A novel idea, no doubt.

Even delivery services like Swiggy and Zomato got in a few digs regarding the entire situation. Swiggy even went so far as to share a photoshopped image of Elon Musk's cart with Twitter, Motichoor Ladoo and Kaju Katli as his checkout items.

Zomato wasn't going to be left behind and tweeted that Elon Musk bought Twitter faster than most users could even decide on what pizza to order. A bit out of line, but they're right.

The best has to be the tweet by Amul. The image included the cheeky caption 'Yeh Cheez Badi hai Musk, Musk' followed by 'Share it, don't have it, Elon'.

MEDIA REACTS

The media weren't silent through this entire situation with publications like The Verge stoking the flames by publishing an article titled, "How to deactivate your Twitter account" and promptly got ratioed by a troll twitter account.

Podcast host and MMA commentator Joe Rogan found out that Musk had bought Twitter live on his podcast.

CONCLUSION:

Everyone and their pets now has something to say about Musk but at the end of the day, as we've said before, the status quo has been upended. The deal is done and now only time will tell what Musk will do with the platform. Will Elon Musk uphold the values of true free speech or will it capitulate to state-sponsored interference? Honestly, only time will tell and the only thing we can all collectively do is wait and see.
