

Super Mario Bros movie delayed

The upcoming adaptation of Nintendo's Super Mario Bros. video game series has been delayed to 2023. <https://digit.in/may22-72>

Apple's Pachinko will be back

Apple has confirmed season 2 of Soo Hugh's creation Pachinko even before season 1 finale. <https://digit.in/may22-73>

digit diary

Hear ye, dear reader! What a tale we have for you, of our travels and travails from outside our homes and offices. Finally!

PRESS EVENTS ARE BACK

First of all, thanks to the long ban on Covid restrictions getting lifted, tech companies slowly started doing on-ground events – once again. Oh yes, and one member of our team had still not gotten a taste of representing Digit at a press conference – that person who is constantly enamoured by all things camera and photography. Take a guess. So when Canon revealed their latest product – a touring bus that serves as a full-equipped mobile, post-production unit on wheels – our newest Digit member had nothing short of an orgasm in front of it, such was his uncontrolled excitement and pleasure of stepping into this mecca of photographic marvels! Needless to say, prying him away from the bus was more time consuming than rendering files in Premiere Pro, no exaggeration!!

NO DOWN TIME

The team definitely broke a record in terms of closing back-to-back magazine issues in terms of quickest turnaround time. There was a huge scare for a few days about whether we could pull off all that we had to do by our own self-imposed, crazy deadlines. But after lots of nail-biting and intense worrying, the whole team came together and rolled up their sleeves to do what they do best – bring out this issue with all the love and care for each and every single one of you. Before long, we patted each other's back for a job well-done, and started packing our bags to go off to... AGRA!

WAH TAJ!

Yes, all the urgency in closing this magazine issue in record time was thanks to all of us here at Team Digit departing to our annual off-site – which hadn't taken place for over two years because of the pandemic lockdowns. We had an adventurous Rajdhani train journey from Mumbai to Agra – playing Uno, watching movies, and listening to music. It was Jayesh's very first Rajdhani train trip, a bucket list item he was more than happy to cross off his list. After the freezing cold of the train's AC compartment, braving the searingly hot weather of Agra was quite a challenge – which all of us successfully completed by spending almost all of our outdoor time in and around our hotel's pool. Determined to spend the maximum amount of his time in the water, Ali actually turned into a very embarrassing shade of pink, not because of blushing but slowly burning himself to a slow crisp in the Agra sun. As Mithun, Manish and Jayesh idled around or dozed off in the shade, Dhriti probably had a great time all by herself, determined not to let the gang of boys ruin her plans of experiencing some much needed peace and solitude from the past week's crazy hecticness. Despite everyone else's chickening out, Ali braved the Agra heat to go and see the Taj Mahal – one of the wonders of the world – in all its shining glory, and he came back smitten like he had found his life's Mumtaz while exploring the world heritage mausoleum.

While we were enjoying off-site, work was still going on thanks to a whole new bunch of enthusiastic interns that Mithun recruited for the summer months. They even contributed with snippets for the May 2022 issue, in the time honoured tradition of every intern who works at Digit. God knows we'll need their help, what with the June 2022 Anniversary Issue planning and execution – the thought of which is making all of us sweat profusely in the swimming pool in Agra, no doubt. We are also going to slowly start shifting to a whole new office – with a bigger studio that would allow us to shoot more video content for all of you – this month. Mithun and Jayesh have managed to block off a conference room for themselves, having long conversations on where to sit for optimum air conditioning air flow, much to the amusement of Dhriti, Manish and Ali. More adventures next month, so long!

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

"How to go back to Windows 10?!?"

— Ali, frustrated at Windows 11

Disclaimer: Because April issue was delayed inordinately due to production complications and paper shortage, we find ourselves completing May Issue even before April has been sent out.

Our sincere apologies to our readers for the delay. We also have no feedback for April issue to publish as a result.

Send feedback to magazine@digit.in | join us on telegram – t.me/digitgeek | or on discord – discord.gg/mYD8XVt