Greetings, Team Digit!

The moment I impatiently tore open the packing of my first copy of Digit magazine, it became my favourite source of tech news.

A recent change to the magazine that I really liked was the expansion of the Digit Config section to accommodate both Intel and AMD versions for every rig. Other sections I always look forward to are: Geek-Key, reviews, the columns, space-age, and the feature sections. The columns have always contained useful information delivered in a more personal way.

A couple of suggestions:

-The November 2021 issue (The first one I read) had a page of memes. That was a nice feature.

-Maybe you could add some reviews/articles on single board computers or microcontrollers.

All in all, Digit magazine really is my technology navigator.

Thank you, Digit, for providing a great source of news, tips, and information in a format that requires the turning of pages.

Regards.

Letters of the Month

So the agent

001 Design is too ancient, so I made a new one, hope you like it. Please reply and tell me your thoughts.

—Raghwender Vasishth

Happy Birthday Raghwender. While we cannot use your design for legal reasons, we're sharing it with our readers. You did an amazing job, and yes we get the hint. We'll look into updating Agent001's drawings. Just like me, Agent001 too has aged a little over the years. He's very thrilled that someone drew him and made him look younger! :-)

diGit diary

If you are ever curious about what the Digit gang is up to, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall – it's all here folks.

Raabo flew all the way from Australia to spend a month with Team Digit. He didn't throw a single Aussie slang our way, a HUGE improvement over his last trip in 2019. Crikey! As summer turned slushy from monsoon rains, signalling the end of this season's batch of interns, a long heralded partner in crime finally walked into our office just in time to take over the workload. Fresh off his Belgium travels, and aiming to rise to the ultimate challenge of Digit members past and present, Satvik Pandey's beaming smile didn't hide his sense of singular focus and determination. Completing the journey of college reader to working towards shaping Digit's future destiny, young Satvik Pandey is the first disciple of the mystical religion of Raaboism we have encountered in close to a decade. A jolly good lad, if we have seen one.

After eight long years, this month also saw us bid farewell to our old, beloved office. We left behind a lot of fond memories – of late nights away from family and friends, finishing testing and magazine closing often into the graveyard shift. A time where colleagues become friends with shared interest, of collective suffering and happiness unlike anything else, forging bonds that would last the test of time. We move on to write a fresh chapter in the life of Digit. Thank you, as always, for continuing on our journey! d
