

iPhones might get AOD

iPhone 14 could copy this popular Android feature of Always On Display but just for the Pro models. <https://digit.in/jun22-44>

Microsoft's Industrial Metaverse

Microsoft along with Kawasaki will use the "industrial metaverse" in its factories to produce robots. <https://digit.in/jun22-45>

Breaking Away

Lie flat or fly away, for the horror of the real world is too much to take.

Pritam Biswas | feedback@digit.in

PLANT-FLEX

Time to stop displaying your fancy orange sneakers and welcome the horticulture version of 'flexing' where house plants are used as a 'status symbol'. Think about it, your peers come over, and you find them huddled around a Monstera deliciosa in your living room, swaying gently in the wind. Adapted from rap songs, 'flex' is often associated with lifestyle, but the introduction of the same as a post-fix to plant is beautifully bizarre.

For gardening enthusiasts and plant lovers, finally, the idea of being able to equate a house plant to a sports car is a dream come true. They have been looking at the audacious prices being quoted in plant auctions their entire life, or even buying from the same. But sadly, not getting the deserved attention. The addition of the word 'plant-flex' to dictionaries might change the game.

The craze for houseplants or exotic trees is nothing new, but the use of plants as a 'flex' culture is something that has been long in the pipeline. While we think that superfast bikes or unbelievably toxic working hours are nothing to flex about, plant-flex is something that might redeem the carbon emissions, purify the air, and tell the world how rich you are! Not everyone has a Monstera shipped directly from the heartlands of Mexico.

Monstera Plant or Swiss Cheese Plant

TANG-PING

China is a superpower. It is accelerating in several sectors with its ever-ambitious economic projects. The youth of the country are being overworked with ever diminishing returns. Tang-ping started as a monastic protest against the arduous working model of the country. In a response to the 10 hours a day, 6 days a week work model, Chinese youth want to tang-ping or lie flat and return to the more human-centred values.

In the battle to 'get ahead' in the all-consuming rat race of life, there is a greater than ever deterioration of well-being and mental health. Gen Z has rejected the idea of all consumerism and returned to the more basic elements of human life by lying down. To add more spice to this, the Chinese government is worried that this trend can break or challenge the established social and economic order.

Go on then, lie on your back and get that playlist ready to indulge yourself in some much-needed tang-ping on a fine Monday morning. Just do not blame us if you get fired!

MEMEIFICATION OF DEPP-HEARD

The televised proceeding of the Amber Heard vs. Johny Depp defamation case has taken personal trauma mockery to a whole new level in the entertainment business. The least I can do is not bore you with the recap of what has happened. For if you have been on social media in this past one month, you know what is happening.

Memes, short edited videos as well as Gifs that poke fun at the situation or the people involved in it are all out there on social media. We have