all laughed at the memes which poke fun at the smug faces or the laughs of Johny Depp, and the many faces of Amber Heard. The introspection of the entire scenario being played out in front of us brings us to an ethical dilemma. Social commentary on high-profile divorce cases is not something new, but memeifying the entire proceeding explains what exactly is wrong with human beings.

The memes (almost always assigning you to the Depp camp) are trending on all discover pages of social media. Yes, we cannot avoid it, but sparing a thought for others in a similar situation is the need of the hour.

BE REAL

It is not advice; it is an app! More specifically, it is a social media app. But this time with an added twist. As the name suggests, the app demands the real, unfiltered version of you! The likes of Instagram and Snapchat have garnered perfectionism in every individual. A dress that's out of the world, or an aesthetically pleasing pub, is Instagram worthy otherwise it is not. Be Real has thrown out a challenge to the established norms of social media by doing something new.

Be Real, a picture-based app will send a notification within two minutes of which you have to upload a post using both your front and back cameras. If you do not post in the stipulated two-minute period, the app lets other users know that it is not a true real-time representation! This cuts out the editing and trickery involved in showcasing the 'perfect' picture! The application can feel like a breath of fresh air in the cut-throat competition on social media giving users a liberating experience. Try it today and tell us how the new concept works for you.

CHILDREN-FICTION HORROR

Horror has been a famous genre in the entertainment industry. From acclaimed movies like The Shining to web series like The Haunting of Hill House, they have all given us our fair share of riveting experiences for many years. What is new you ask?

Let us start with Doctor Strange in the Multiverse of Madness and the seamless induction of horror in a children's comic-based movie series that has lived on its safe refuge of action and humour. Many fans have complained about Sam Raimi's latest being 'too scary' in several parts. From a zombified Doctor Strange to Wanda Maximoff smashing the Avengers in another universe to a pulp, the flick is the beginning of a venture into the unexplored by Marvel movies.

If the pictures released are to be believed, our beloved characters Winnie the Pooh and Piglet will appear on screen as a slasher and go on a rampage in the horror film Winnie the Pooh: Blood and Honey. Turning our fun heroes and lovable characters into demonic avatars of them and is a pretty interesting twist we never needed, but are surely enjoying!

AEROPLANE LIVERIES

Bright colours and beautiful designs on an aeroplane's body is always amazing to see. And we cannot deny, that we love a thematic aeroplane. The Simpsons, Tintin, Pokémon, The Hobbit and Star Wars have all been eye-boggling aeroplane themes.

Recently in celebration of May the Fourth (Star Wars Day), Alaska Airlines landed a drop-dead gorgeous livery design on one of its flights. The paintjob took 27 days and required 228 gallons of paint. To add to the experience the company offered priority boarding to anyone wearing Star Wars gear!

Head over to Alaska Airlines on YouTube to see the Airbus getting painted in a one-minute time-lapse video. The only downgrade is the fact that Han Solo would not be piloting this flight.
