A warrior's most prized possession is their sword. The sword and its bearer are often referred to together in history. A sword is also a symbol of valour, bravery and is as strong as the hand which holds it. Throughout history, swords and their bearers have had great importance. Both in history and mythology, swords have gained the limelight, sometimes more than people. These blades carry a legacy of their own, and also speak volumes about their owner's prestigious and remarkable achievements.

So let's dive into some of the most legendary swords and their wielders which made history or simply wowed our collective imagination.

1. THE EXCALIBUR:

Excalibur is the sword which Arthur drew from a stone as a child, according to the Arthurian legends. In medieval history, it's said that he pulled the sword from an anvil sitting atop a stone. It is also said that the sword had special powers. It is Britain's legendary sword and is also given the credit for being the weapon which made Arthur King of the land. The legend also says that, on his deathbed, Arthur instructed Sir Bedvire, one of his knights, to throw the sword into the lake.

2. THE WALLACE:

The Wallace Sword is sometimes referred to as the Freedom Sword, as the sword and the wielder, William Wallace always stood for freedom. William Wallace was a Scottish knight who led wars against the English, for Scotland's independence in the 13th century. The legendary sword was used in the Battle of Stirling in 1297 and the Battle of Falkirk in 1298. The sword is massive, double-handled and weighing about 3 KG. Experts also believe that Wallace might have been 7 feet tall, for proper handling of the sword. It is currently on display at the National Wallace Monument in Stirling, Scotland.

3. ZULFIQAR SCIMITAR:

Also known as the "Spin-Splitter". The sword was actually gifted to Ali ibn Abi Talib to him by Muhammad. It has a curve which is similar to a scimitar. However, it cannot be termed as a proper scimitar as, after the bend, Zulfiqar turns into a double-blade with a slight scissor-like opening. According to the legend, Zulfiqar was gifted to Ali, as Muhammad was impressed by Ali's battlefield strength and gave the sword to Ali during the battle of Uhud. Zulfiqar has since been lost, but it is believed by some that the last Imam will come wielding the sword.

4. THE SWORD OF GOUJIAN:

This is one of the most pristine artifacts which was found by a team of archaeologists in 1965 in the Zhang River Reservoir in Jingzhou, China. The sword was found lying next to a human skeleton in a water-damaged tomb. The whole tomb deteriorated after having been soaked in water for a thousand years, but interestingly, the sword was almost untarnished and still retained its sharp edges. All because of its scabbard, which provided an airtight finish around the ancient sword. The sword has a total length of 22-inches. Primarily, made of copper, both sides of the blade are decorated with rombi patterns. On one side of the blade, characters are engraved in bird-worm seal script. The sword belonged to Goujian, who ruled the kingdom of Yue from 496 BC - 465 BC. The sword currently
