Letter of the Month

Hi,

Allow me to share my feedback and suggestions on eDVDs.

The magazine, dmysify, fasttrack and posters all are good. But when coming to the eDVD, I see it lacks the charm and contents of what we used to get 2-3 years back, before which it had. The content is repetitive and can be found easily over internet.

I would suggest that you can reduce the GB numbers to even 8-10GB, the same which DVDs had, and introduce some exclusive content - Maybe videos on something interesting, especially designed by Digit so that it will be unique and only Digit subscribers/readers will have access to. I miss Digit's partnership with software companies where we got a paid software for free. On the games part I would more enjoy demo games of some great titles, along with a few open source and freeware ones.

The satisfaction feeling of a 90s kid with DVDs was when the DVDs/CDs came with that awesome content which came along with it...

It can be explained with a meme... though opinions would differ - Ek-dum se waqt badal gaya... later part you know. :)

It might take some time before the eDVDs are refined to people's liking... but I am sure readers will feel satisfied when they find that awesome feeling of Digit DVDs come alive with the eDVDs also...

Keep Rocking Digit... it is a sea of knowledge, be it Science, Technology, Culture and so on...Wishing all the best and hope eDVDs are more potent and filled with useful content in coming Digit editions...

Thanks a lot 🙏

If you are ever curious about what the Digit gang is up to, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall - it's all here folks.

This month started off in a rush. Between settling down in the new office and working long hours to close this edition in just 17 days, there was a lot that went down.

Satvik was put through a baptism of fire, after being tasked with heading the issue closing this month. Between writing articles, and proof-reading what others had submitted, our resident gamers Manish and Mithun, found time to squeeze in a few sessions of Diablo Immortal. We are being generous when we say sessions because valuable work hours were spent by M&M killing "the evil spawn of hell".

As we bid adieu to our last office space and walked into the new one, wars broke out. Everyone ran around looking for their "spot". People who earlier sat together chatting and doing everything but writing were split into different cabins. The management took this chance to get the roomiest of the rooms, while the rest of the editorial staff was chucked into a cubby hole. When the dust settled, everyone found their own nooks and decorated them to their liking.

Dhriti lost a few things between all of this shifting. The first was her expensive bottle of shampoo which she had gotten delivered to office. Second, she lost a battle with the ender dragon. cough "I am a pro at Minecraft" cough. 🐉
