

Most financial experts aren't even debating whether a recession is coming or not, the talk is all about how bad it will be. In uncertain times, a lot of us have got used to retail therapy to soothe our nerves. It's what happened at the start of the pandemic, with all of us online shopping to try and forget that we were stuck in our houses. A recession is not the time to be seeking that type of catharsis. This cover story will make a case for not buying most things, or at least buying very carefully, and smarter...
